

The Transportation Security Administration (TSA) recently announced implementation of the Secure Flight program, which shifts pre-departure watch list matching responsibilities from individual aircraft operators to the TSA. With the move, airlines must provide the TSA with a passenger's full name (as shown on state or government ID), date of birth and gender in order to issue a boarding pass. If available, passport data, redress number and known traveler number must also be transmitted to the TSA.

Secure Flight requires that domestic aircraft operators request and collect the full name as of May 15, 2009 and date of birth and gender as of August 15, 2009 for their domestic flights. For International flights, full name, date of birth and gender must be requested and collected as of October 31, 2009.

Effective Friday-May 8th, your traveler coordinators and travelers will have the capability to update their own individual travel profile with this new information in AirPortal®. You will also be able to include this new required information in any new future traveler profiles submitted via your company dedicated URL link for profiles.

An example of both of these updates are listed below:

The name on the record/reservation does not have to match up exactly with the name on the I.D. but the name required for transmission to TSA must match up with the I.D. This name transmission to the TSA will be completed by your Travel Agent.

For example. If the reservation is made in the name of SMITH/DAVID, but his I.D. shows SMITH/DAVID.ALLEN

Then the transmission remarks must show SMITH/DAVID/ALLEN.
But the name field on the ticket can still read SMITH/DAVID.

The TSA could require the record/reservation name to match up exactly, but right now the name in the transmission to TSA is the main concern.
